1-5 THE COST OF MEAT. RICH CREAM With GRAPE NUTS. A Charming Dish.

VALUE OF CREAM.

As Compared With Meat.

One of the most valuable items in one's dietary is good, rich cream. The remark is frequently made that "cream is too expensive to use freely." Some people think they must have meat every day at 10 and 25 cents per pound and do not realize that 3 cents worth of pure cream for breakfast will do more to put on flesh than 25 or 35 cents worth of meat.

An ideal portion of breakfast is that obtained from say, four teaspoons of Grape-Nuts and a little pure, thick cream, either cold or hot.

This is one of the most delicious dishes imaginable and is served without cooking or trouble of any kind and cannot be equaled in point of food value for the human body.

Made by the Postum Co., at Battle Creek, Mich.

The Grape-Nuts, consisting largely of grape sugar, have passed through processes similar to the first act of digestion and are therefore most easily digested, and in combination with cream
they render the cream itself easy of digestion.

Grocers sell Grape-Nuts.

NEW VEGETABLES

Are Offered for Sale in the Local Market.

POTATOES ARE SCARCE

And Sell at a High Price—Country
Butter is Plentiful and Remains at Same Price.

The local markets tomorrow will afford quite a nice variety of new vegetables. Most everything in that line comes from Chicago and is grown in hot houses. There will be cucumbers and they will sell at 25 cents each. Fresh tomatoes will cost 8 cents each. New onions and radishes sell for 5 cents per bunch and lettuce for 5 cents. Cauliflower sells for about 20 cents per head. There is also the usual run of vegetables. In the line of fruits there are California oranges at 25 cents per dozen, bananas at 15 cents and pine apples at 25 cents to 30 cents each. Strawberries can be procured now but if there are any offered in Decatur they will come at a high price.

Potatoes are now very scarce and sell at 90 cents and $1 per bushel.
New potatoes cost $1 per peck and seed potatoes, Early Rose and Early Ohio, are sold at $1 and $1.25 per bushel.

The price of eggs remains at 15 cents per dozen but there is a supply sufficient to meet the demand. Country butter is plentiful and sells at 15 cents per pound for a good grade.
Chickens are rather scarce. They bring 35 cents to 45 cents each, selling at 7 cents per pound live weight.

THE OLD WAY.

Of Treating Dyspepsia and Indigestion by Dieting a Dangerous and Useless One.

We say the old way but really it is a very common one at the present time and many dyspeptics and physicians as well consider the first step to take in attempting to cure indigestion is to diet, either by selecting certain foods or rejecting others or to greatly diminish the quantity usually taken, in other words, the starvation plan is by many supposed to be the first essential.

The almost certain failure of the starvation cure for dyspepsia has been proven time and again, but still the moment dyspepsia makes its appearance a course of dieting is at once advised.

All this is radically wrong. It is foolish and unscientific to recommend dieting or starvation to a man suffering from dyspepsia, because indigestion itself starves every organ and every nerve and every fibre in the body.

What the dyspeptic wants is abundant nutrition, which means plenty of good wholesome, well cooked food and something to assist the weak stomach to digest it. This is exactly the purpose for which Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are adapted and this is the method by which they cure the worst cases of dyspepsia, in other words the patient eats plenty of wholesome food and Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets digest it for him. In this way the system is nourished and the overworked stomach rested, because the tablets will digest the food whether the stomach works or not.

Your druggist will tell you that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are the purest and safest remedy for stomach troubles and every trial makes one more friend for this excellent preparation. Sold at 50 cents, for full sized packages at all drug stores.

AT THE GRAND.

DEWEY WAR PLAY.

The most successfully played production in Chicago this season was undoubtedly "Dewey, the Hero of Manila," which was first played on Christmas day. Not having been written and staged in a hurry like the other "war plays," to catch a few dollars from the popular enthusiasm existing immediately after the close of the struggle, this production has the merit of historical accuracy, logical plot and careful construction.

The scenery, which consists of seven stage sets, is described as a triumph of the scenic painter's art, and far superior to anything shown in the war plays. It appeals to all classes of the community and is particularly satisfactory to the intelligent and refined who have followed the events of the war in the newspapers.

By actual count at a recent performance in Chicago "Dewey the Hero of Manila" received 70 rounds of applause during the four acts. Well, Dewey deserves all the applause Americans can give him. The company will appear Monday evening, March 20, and the prices will be 10, 20 and 30 cents.

NEW POLITICAL PARTY.

In 1890 the voters of the country represented but two political organizations. While there was the Free Silver Republican party, two branches of the Populist party, the Prohibition and the Democratic parties they all united substantially on the free silver and other declarations of the Chicago platform and all supported Bryan for president. Opposed to this alliance was the Republican party and the gold Democrats.

This state of things, it is said, is not to be permitted to exist. There are too many reformers with views not in harmony with each other and their sensitive consciences cannot be satisfied without a party that completely commands in every detail the approval of their consciences and the lot of new parties is again with it. The first installment of these has been announced. A call has been issued for a conference to be held at Buffalo, New York, June 25 to July 1st.

The prime movers have among their number Governor Piatt, ex-Governor Altgeld, "Coke" Harvey, Eugene Debs and several other distinguished political cranks several of whom want to be the nominee for president.

This combination of statesmen and prophets announce that the country is in the midst of important political changes in issues and parties. Of course in this case the wish is father to the thought. Some such declaration must be established in order to make the new departure essential.

They declare this as the reason why the Brooklyn conference is necessary, to take survey of the situation and adopt resolutions. They indicate considerable suspicion of the honesty of each other as they declare in the call that being only a conference, by which they mean a sort of feeder no one is to be bound by any resolution adopted for which he did not vote. This is a sort of guarantee of a safe retreat in case the conference is captured by the depraved and the unscrupulous.

Other conferences, originating from other sources will from now on be in order. They will be called to meet here and there and each will declare a profound reason for meeting. There will be conferences for the purpose of saving the country by forestalling the wicked purpose of some other conference to shelve Colonel Bryan. There will be conferences to inaugurate the initiative and referendum, so that the cranks of the country who cannot break into our legislatures and Congress may have a hand in legislation.

There will be conferences to determine whether the "crime of '73" is still a crime or whether it is not better to make an open break for rag money, and there may be conferences having in view the placing of Cleveland or Gorman at the head of the Democratic ticket. All this is simply the confessions of a defeated and discredited set of calamity howlers, who having severed power failed in every promise it made to the people and brought the country to the verge of financial ruin and now broken and disordered is trying to find some new method of deceiving the people and breaking into power again.

Against it all stands the Republican party, the party that keeps its promises to the people, the party of courage that has the ability to build up the places laid waste by the opposition and bring prosperity to the people even in the midst of war, the party led by President McKinley, which will enter the campaign of 1896 bold and united and will again sweep the calamity howlers, the free silverites, the political mountebanks and blather-mongers defeated to the rear.

St. Louis Globe-Democrat: About a score of well-meaning but misguided men, among whom are Carl Schurz, John Sherman, John C. Calhoun, Herman Von Holst and Andrew Carnegie, appeal to the country to stop warring on the Philippines. These persons send their request to the wrong quarter. They ought to have made it to Aguinaldo about five weeks ago. Aguinaldo started the war a day or two before the time set for final action on the treaty. He timed his attack on the American troops so as to make it frighten, as he expects, the friends of the treaty, and secure its defeat. Aguinaldo's American allies—Hear, Vest, Hale, Billy Mason and other "sincere" villifiers of their country—had been telling that the ratification of the treaty would be a worse crime than George III's closure of the port of Boston, quartering of troops on the people, revocation of the charter of Massachusetts, and revival of an act which would send the patriot leaders over to England for trial, and that ratification would be sure to bring war. Aguinaldo then stepped in by making his assault on O. R. Owen, supposing that he would thus help his allies out and terrify the American people into dropping the treaty. He made as grievous a miscalculation of the temper of the Americans as his champions in the senate had done. Aguinaldo thus began the war which the Americans are now ending.

How silly and incapable of self-government the Filipinos led by Aguinaldo have shown themselves to be, in putting themselves in the attitude of armed hostility to the United States. Compared with our troops as lighters they are about in the same relation as the old fashioned ball to a modern throwing machine.

General Miles seems to have been misled by a certain General Joe Wheeler's affairs with about as little dignity as a child with a broken toy.

Democratic rule in Missouri has resulted in an empty state treasury just as it did in Illinois.

In the first month has been stirred up about General Wheeler it is safe to say that the president has been and is now with Wheeler.

N. Jackson, Danville, Ill., writes: My daughter had a severe attack of La Grippe several years ago and since then whenever she takes cold a terrible cough settles on her lungs. ## Given Up by Four Doctors.

BRADY DAW, O. My daughter, after being treated by four doctors, and being given up for lost, a neighbor recommended Foley's Kidney Cure. Today she is able to walk several miles without fatigue. I feel we would have lost her if it was not for your medicine. Respectfully, Mrs. J. M. Baurer.

Three thousand marriages are performed every day all over the world.

For a quick remedy and one that is perfectly safe for children let us recommend One Minute Cough Cure. It is excellent for croup, hoarseness, tickling in the throat and coughs. H. W. Bell, N. L. Krohn, C. F. Shilling, East End Drug Store.

ROYALTY SHAKES HANDS.

Nearly All the European Monarchs Are Democratic in This Respect.

Emperor William has a powerful grasp, and it is one of his majesty's jokes to greet a visitor with a handshake that is not soon forgotten. When William has thus vouchsafed a newcomer they say at court: "His majesty has made another lasting impression."

The Kaiser is the only monarch in Europe who is really liberal with handshakes among all sorts of people. When he visits a monarch, or is visited by one, he shakes him with six knocks, three on the right and three on the left. This before a crowd of thousands of onlookers, not to mention a regiment or two of soldiers. As a general thing his kisses are for everybody only. True, he kissed Herbert Spencer upon his recent arrival at Friedrichsruh, a well-known "friend" but in doing this he had no object in view. And, besides, Herbert and he were chums at one time.

The emperor of Austria will under no consideration shake the hand of even his most intimate or most distinguished minister or general. A slight bow, a kindly smile is all he allows for, no matter what service he may have rendered the emperor. And yet Francis Joseph winks the feet of 12 poor men every good Friday.

Czar Nicholas makes it a point to shake hands with sovereigns only. He has a large assortment of left-handed gloves, one for each of them, and Princesses, Transylvanian, Countess, Nicholas, the great beauty, Wilhelmina, wife of Grand Duke Nicholas, of the czar treats all these ladies very kindly, and when they visit him he kisses each on the forehead, in accordance with Russian custom.

The etiquette guardians of the Russian court were in a quandary when the czar intended to meet M. Faure, president of the French republic, at St. Petersburg. M. Faure, though the chief magistrate of a great nation, is a commoner by trade, and it would never do for the white czar to shake him by the hand. Consequently there were long negotiations between his majesty's court marshals and the French "director of the protocol," which is the style by which the master of ceremony in the Elisee is known. These two dignitaries spent many weeks trying to find an intermediate between the kiss, belonging to the sovereign, and the handshake reserved for royal relatives, until Nicholas put an end to red tape by declaring that he would embrace Faure, press him to his bosom, no more.

King Humbert of Italy is a strong man and a man of strong impulses. He likes a person or wishes him to like him or her. All admitted to audience with his majesty are favored by a hearty handshake.

The King of Sweden dislikes official handshakes and is usually very content with his ministers, but when away from home he is fond of entering into conversation with farmers and sailors, and if he finds these people agreeable on taking leave gives them his hand.

The prince of Wales is a hearty handshaker. He holds that every person good enough to be introduced to him is good enough to be shaken by the hand. He shook hands with Richard Croker.

The venerable king of Denmark subscribes to the same view.—Chicago Times-Herald.

HE HADN'T A CENT.

The Embarrassment of Lord Rhodes in Which Millions of Gold Rhodes Once Found Himself.

Cecil Rhodes, the South African millionaire, like other great men, is careless about money. On one occasion he received a command to dine and sleep at Windsor castle and turned up at Buckingham station with no money. His private secretary bought his ticket for him and gave him for pocket money a couple of sovereigns, which was all he had with him.

When Rhodes reached the old castle above the Thames and began dressing to dine with Queen Victoria he had the two sovereigns upon the table intending to transfer them to the pockets of his evening momentous, but forgot them when he went down. He died, had a few words with her majesty, retired, smoked and went back to his bedroom. The money was gone. The servants, accustomed to generous fees, naturally supposed that the money had been accidentally left there for them, and of course Mr. Rhodes could neither explain the circumstances to them nor trouble his royal hostess about so slight a matter.

The next morning he was driven to the station in one of the queen's carriages. Luckily he had his return ticket and reached London, like Dick Whittington and many another famous man, without a penny in his pocket. Unlike Whittington, he didn't have even a cat. However, he had only to walk to his offices to find the penny that he needed and others to keep it company.—N. Y. World.

Needed a Reminder.

"I was elected by the votes of eight different nationalities," said an East Side alderman, as he tucked his thumbs in the armpits of his vest and struck an attitude.

"That so? Who were they?"

"Irish, German, Polish, English, Italian, French and Greek."

"That's only seven."

"What the devil was the other, now?"

"There were eight, sure."

"Americans," suggested a reporter.

"That's it. Couldn't think of it to save me."—Detroit Free Press.

VOTERS SPEAK

There are dealers who are themselves most excellent judges. One such man, possessing objects that are infinitely desirable in almost all the branches of art, is perennially poor, because he hates to let anything for which he can conscientiously charge a decent price. Great people visit his shop continually, and he might ask what he liked and be sure of getting it. He has been known, however, when he has received warnings of an impending visit, to hide the very objects which he knows the coming connoisseur would surely buy if he should see them.

Once upon a time (and this is no fairy tale) he had an unlimited commission to buy choice pieces of Nankin for a wealthy collector. He bought a few pieces, and took his commission, albeit he hated himself for so doing. Then he heard privately that a small but exquisite collection was in the market. He went straight to his employer and implored the fact to him; then he resigned his commission. The employer thinks him mad to this day. The truth was that he could not endure the thought of buying so lovely a collection and handing it over to another, even though he would have taken a handsome reward for so doing, and could never have afforded to purchase it for himself. The only way in which one may deal profitably with art is by acquiring a knowledge and an appreciation equal to his own. Then he will part with all that is best among his possessions—things that the ordinary wealthy customer is never even allowed to see—and you afterward suspect that he has sold them to you without the smallest profit.—Chambers Journal.

Offensive Handicraft.

Mrs. Smith—I suppose you have no objection to telling me why you left your last place?

My mistress, Mrs. Brown, was a saint.

On the habit of telling falsehoods?

Well, I cannot blame you. In what way did she tell wrong stories?

She told me she saw Mr. Brown in the hall, and Mrs. Brown told me to see him do it. Of course, that wasn't true, you know.

—Boston Transcript.

Why He Objected.

Friend—I wish you would tell those four ladies to stop talking; the noise is driving me mad.

Attend—How can they make a noise when they talk with their fingers?

Well, don't act as if you were deaf. You don't hear them speak louder than words?—Chicago Evening News.

REAL ANTIQUE OAK.

Brass That is Seven Thousand Years Old Was Buried Under Chicago.

There are oak logs that have been buried for seven thousand years in the city of Chicago. Prof. Gosselin, the Chicago geologist, who has been the local stratigrapher and helped to unearth the remains of some of the prehistoric trees, has just come to the city with two fossil trunks, which are the remains of oak trees that have been buried for seven thousand years. The logs are of a size which the geologists are unable to explain. No previous logs of this size have ever been imported into the city. The logs are of a size which the geologists are unable to explain. No previous logs of this size have ever been imported into the city.

For some time Helen attended a private school in Cambridge, but she is now studying with a tutor and fitting for Radcliffe. Her careful training in Greek showed during her visit to the museum. She appeared thoroughly familiar with the old Greek mythologies, and it seems that she has just been reading the Iliad. A letter suggesting the visit was sent her by her friend, Miss Cobb, formerly a teacher of the blind, and Helen accepted the invitation, saying that she had always wanted to see the "silver-bowed god and the white-armed goddesses."

At the museum the first statue shown her was that of Apollo. A step ladder was brought, and she mounted until she could reach the face. She put both hands on the forehead, touching it lightly with the tips of her fingers. From the center of the forehead she deftly followed the curves outward, then down the cheeks until her hands met at the chin; then both eyes were touched; then the nose, and lastly the mouth, her hands moving in unison. Next the arms and other parts of the statue were examined. This was the order pursued each time. Every new curve was a surprise and a pleasure to her. She was as eager as a child at each fresh discovery, and when anything pleased her especially she would give a quick gasp of pleasure and clasp her hands, bending forward her whole figure. Helen's comment on Apollo was: "It is grand beyond description." Of another god she said: "He has an exalted look," and of Medusa: "Her expression is painful."

The deftness and quickness with which she could examine a statue were wonderful, but what impressed the onlooker as even more remarkable was that she seemed to read the artist's thought through her sensitive fingers as readily as a seeing person could take it in by a glance. She was shown a bas-relief of a mother bidding farewell to her child. In this the arms of the mother were missing. Her first question was: "Where are the mother's arms?" She should embrace her child? And, as she was not at first understood, she repeated the word "embrace," at the same time putting her arms around Miss Cobb. Of the mother she remarked: "She has sorrowful eyes, wide open; her lips seem to quiver; she lifts up her forehead a little."

Helen Keller's vocabulary is quaint and bookish, quite different from that of an ordinary schoolgirl. She talks as if she were translating. She enunciates slowly and with an earnest effort to be understood, but in order to catch every word she says one must give close attention. There is a slight thickening of speech. When she desired explanation about any of the statues, she reached for the hand of Miss Cobb, who spelled into her fingers what she wanted to know.

Her quickness of perception astonished everybody. Upon being shown a bas-relief of some dancing girls she immediately asked: "Where are the characters?" seeming to detect their absence simply by touch even sooner than it would be noted by a seeing person. The adjoining bas-relief represented singers, there being four or five figures. The lips of one were closed, and as soon as her fingers touched it she announced: "One is silent." A little farther on was a statue of Neptune, and on feeling the empty hand her instant question was: "Where is the trident?"

She is not without a sense of humor. She said of Euripides, laughingly: "He is not so handsome as Pericles." The latter she had previously described as having "a fine, strong face, full of spirit and thought." And Sappho was the "Sappho she had always loved to think of, sweet, smiling Sappho." Julius Caesar looked "just like what he was." She was especially pleased with Michael Angelo's group of mother and child, and after having examined each of its figures separately she placed one hand on the mother's face and the other on that of the child and remained in that position for a brief minute, as if transfixed with the perfect figure of motherhood. Then she said softly: "It is very sweet and lovely."

There was an absorbed and expectant silence in the big room as the blind girl passed with rapid face from statue to statue. The little group of students following her watched her with an almost breathless interest as she stood on the top of the step ladder, groping and smiling. They were eager to catch every word she might say. With eyes as sightless as the vacant orbits of stone about her, yet with a wonderful intelligence disclosed in every motion, she presented a picture of extraordinary interest and one which will never be forgotten by those who saw it.—Congregationalist.

Why People Are Right-Handed.

A professor who has made a study of children says he has discovered why the majority of people are right-handed. Infants use both hands until they begin to speak. The motor speech function controls the right side of the body, and the right-handed motions are expressive motions tending to help out speech. As speech grows so does right-handedness.—Chicago Tribune.

SHE ENJOYS STATUARY.

Helen Keller, the Famous Blind Girl, Visits the Boston Art Museum.

I had the good fortune to witness the unique scene in the Boston Art museum, two or three weeks ago, when Helen Keller, the beautiful deaf and blind girl, was taken to "see" the statuary. Helen Keller is now 17 years old. She has a beautiful form and her face is expressive to a most unusual degree. She gives one an impression of fresh, happy girlhood. There is a slight deformity of the eyes, but very other feature is perfect, and her mouth is especially expressive and winsome. With smiling, parted lips, she seems to be filled with a happy expectancy of what the future may bring her.

For some time Helen attended a private school in Cambridge, but she is now studying with a tutor and fitting for Radcliffe. Her careful training in Greek showed during her visit to the museum. Helen Keller's vocabulary is quaint and bookish, quite different from that of an ordinary schoolgirl. She talks as if she were translating. She enunciates slowly and with an earnest effort to be understood, but in order to catch every word she says one must give close attention. There is a slight thickening of speech. When she desired explanation about any of the statues, she reached for the hand of Miss Cobb, who spelled into her fingers what she wanted to know.

Her quickness of perception astonished everybody. Upon being shown a bas-relief of some dancing girls she immediately asked: "Where are the characters?" seeming to detect their absence simply by touch even sooner than it would be noted by a seeing person. The adjoining bas-relief represented singers, there being four or five figures. The lips of one were closed, and as soon as her fingers touched it she announced: "One is silent." A little farther on was a statue of Neptune, and on feeling the empty hand her instant question was: "Where is the trident?"

She is not without a sense of humor. She said of Euripides, laughingly: "He is not so handsome as Pericles." The latter she had previously described as having "a fine, strong face, full of spirit and thought." And Sappho was the "Sappho she had always loved to think of, sweet, smiling Sappho." Julius Caesar looked "just like what he was." She was especially pleased with Michael Angelo's group of mother and child, and after having examined each of its figures separately she placed one hand on the mother's face and the other on that of the child and remained in that position for a brief minute, as if transfixed with the perfect figure of motherhood. Then she said softly: "It is very sweet and lovely."

There was an absorbed and expectant silence in the big room as the blind girl passed with rapid face from statue to statue. The little group of students following her watched her with an almost breathless interest as she stood on the top of the step ladder, groping and smiling. They were eager to catch every word she might say. With eyes as sightless as the vacant orbits of stone about her, yet with a wonderful intelligence disclosed in every motion, she presented a picture of extraordinary interest and one which will never be forgotten by those who saw it.—Congregationalist.

Why People Are Right-Handed.

A professor who has made a study of children says he has discovered why the majority of people are right-handed. Infants use both hands until they begin to speak. The motor speech function controls the right side of the body, and the right-handed motions are expressive motions tending to help out speech. As speech grows so does right-handedness.—Chicago Tribune.
